

Notification of a material change to an accredited program

The Australian Psychology Accreditation Council Limited (APAC) is the independent quality and standards organisation, appointed by the Psychology Board of Australia (PsyBA) to accredit psychology programs delivered by higher education providers in Australia.

This form allows higher education providers to notify APAC of any material changes to accredited program(s).

Material changes include anything that could impact a program's ability to meet the Accreditation Standards, including, but not limited to:

- academic staffing and senior academic leadership
- program delivery mode or campus
- program content and/or learning outcomes
- structural and/or unit changes
- governance and/or operational arrangements which may impact delivery and/or program quality.

By submitting this form, you understand that – depending on the type of change – ongoing monitoring with specific reporting requirements and/or a site visit may be required to assess the program's continued alignment with the Accreditation Standards.

APAC Rule 3.4 Changes to the education provider or a program during the accreditation period

APAC monitors accredited programs to ensure that they continue to meet the Accreditation Standards, in line with Section 50 of the National Law.

It is the responsibility of the education provider to inform APAC as soon as possible of any changes or proposed changes to the delivery of an accredited program. Failure to inform APAC of any changes may impact on future accreditation status of the program.
